Protecting investors in a capital market union with Mr John GRIFFITH-JONES

The UK has taken major initiatives to reform its prudential and supervisory regulatory architecture, including the creation of the Prudential Regulatory Authority (PRA) under the Bank of England umbrella, the establishment of the Financial Conduct Authority (FCA), and the implementation of new structural banking rules ("Vickers"). The FCA, created by the Financial Services Act (2012), promotes safety and soundness in order to maintain and ensure the integrity of the market, regulate financial services firms so that they give consumers a fair deal and to ensure the financial services market is competitive.
